CLAIM ATTORNEY OF ELLENEN PREDICTS GOOD BUSINESS ERA

Donohue Delivers Fine Address Before the Kiwanis Club
Isolation Policy Not for the Road
Railroad Officials Are Guests of Club At Weekly Meet

The principal speaker of this week's Kiwanis dinner, given last evening at the R. R. Y. M. C., was J. J. Donohue of Louisville, chief claim attorney of the Louisville and Nashville railroad.
Mr. Donohue's address was marked by an eloquent and forceful language, the problems and power of the railroads in the life of the nation, with particular reference to the 74 years of service of the Louisville and Nashville system for the Southland.
Dr. W. R. Hendrix, pastor of the First Methodist church of Birmingham who was here on a visit to his kinsman, Clyde Hendrix, followed Mr. Donohue with kind words of greeting and with frequent references to the present business methods of great corporations in bringing to the general public a knowledge of what they were attempting to accomplish as compared to the old idea of isolation.
Mr. Donohue had announced in his address that the policy of isolation of the Louisville and Nashville railroad did not exist and that its managers were keeping the public informed through "advertisements bottomed on facts" and appealing directly to the common sense and spirit of fairness of the common people.
Dr. Hendrix was followed in a short but highly appreciated address by Charles H. Eyster, local attorney of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, and Mr. Eyster was followed by C. W. Oliver, of Birmingham assistant agent of the Louisville and Nashville.

This speaker referred to the fact that unexpectedly he had met with his home pastor, Dr. Hendrix and had some interesting golf link experiences in which Dr. Hendrix had played prominent parts.

Mr. Tolliver will soon have rounded off 50 years of service with the Louisville and Nashville railroad.

R. D. Ross of Birmingham freight agent of the Louisville and Nashville is another one of the honor guests at the dinner, but he declined an invitation to speak.

Much Business Transacted
Following the dinner which was pronounced unsurpassed by any of the previous dinners of the club, and the speeches of visitors, President W. W. Russell gave a report of the activities of the "pro-farm demonstration agent of Morgan County," committees, and other reports from import-export committees.
Mr. Donohue spoke in part as follows:

"I thank you for your cordial greeting and for the opportunity here presented to talk to you in an intimate

DECATUR COUNCIL DISCUSSES PAVING LEFT-OVER FUNDS

City Attorney Thinks More Streets Can Be Constructed

UNUSUAL TO HAVE TOO MUCH MONEY

Shearer Tells Council How To Help the White Way

The Decatur city council held a long session last night, discussing a number of questions, including the street improvement plans, which are nearing completion.

W. W. Callahan, city attorney, talked over, at length with the council the legal questions involved in the improvements. It was announced several weeks ago that it was regarded as likely that the city would have approximately $50,000 left over from the sale of bonds after the original street improvement plans were finished. City Attorney Callahan was requested to look up the legal provisions covering this unusual question of disposition of the left-over funds.

Mr. Callahan reported to the council that he believed the money could be used to build additional streets, but expressed the belief that if this were done it would be necessary to re-advertise the improvement of all the streets, including the new one or ones to be built. It would not be necessary, however, to re-advertise the sale of the bonds.

Much interest has been shown in the matter of the left-over fund, since it became known that the streets being built probably would be finished for less than the total the bonds brought.

It will be remembered that the improvement bonds brought a little better than par. It was declared having more money than necessary for street improvements was very unusual and officials and citizens alike have been awaiting the opinion of the city attorney with deep interest.

R. M. Shearer, manager of the Albany-Decatur operations of the Alabama Power company also addressed the council in regard to the white way situation. He advanced several plans for consideration of the council by which he hoped to improve the white way service.

Last night's session being the first of the month meeting, the usual reports of officers were received showing the city to be in good financial condition and the monthly bills were allowed.

PRESIDENT GIVEN A GOOD MAJORITY IN HOUSE AND SENATE

Republicans' Victory in Congress Allows A Free Hand

DAVIS HOLDS TO A 'SOLID SOUTH'

LaFollette Will Carry Only Home State—Wisconsin

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—As final returns from doubtful states trickled in it appeared that President Coolidge had carried North Dakota and New Mexico and that the new political lineup in congress would be:

Senate: Republicans 54 Democrats 40, Farm Labor 2, Socialists 1 (Connecticut).

House Republican 246, Democrats 184, Farm-Labor 3, Socialists 2.

At adjournment of congress last June there were in the senate 51 republicans, 43 democrats and 2 farm-laborites. In the house 225 republicans, 207 democrats, 1 socialist, 1 farm-labor and 1 independent.

In several senatorial contests notably in Iowa and in a half dozen congressional contests the races were so close that it is thought a recount might alter the reported result.

Regardless of the outcome the republican organization in both the house and senate seemed assured of a working majority with the LaFollette insurgents unable to get anywhere even with the formation of a coalition with the democrats.

Included among the 54 senators are LaFollette and four others, Norris, Ladd, Frazier and Brookhart who have been elected in the face of unofficial returns and a lot of whom have consistently supported the Wisconsin senator in congress and unless they receive aid from time to time from other republicans who are inclined to vote independently they will be unable to trim the republican vote below the majority of 49.

Mangus Johnson one of the Farm-Labor senators last night confessed defeat by Representative Thomas D. Schall a republican who as a member of the house has shown an indication at times to vote independently.

In New Mexico Senator Bursam, republican, continued to trail his democratic opponent Sam G. Braton although President Coolidge maintained a lead over John W. Davis his nearest opponent.

With a good share of the states precincts still on the re-election of representative Morrow, democrat, appeared probably but not certain. The last hope of LaFollette adherents of carrying a state in addition to Wisconsin went glimmering when the independent candidates manager in North Dakota conceded that Coolidge had won the state.

With North Dakota in the Coolidge column the presidents electoral vote, in the event that he holds the lead in New Mexico, will be 382, that of Davis confined to the "Solid South" 136 and LaFollette 13, his home state of Wisconsin.

In 1920 Harding received 404 electoral votes and Cox 127.

HARTSELLE BRANCH WILL OPEN MONDAY

Cooperation Offered Director Perolio by the Public

The Hartselle branch of the Tennessee Valley laboratory, which is expected to speed up the work of the main unit here, will probably be opened Monday, Director A. J. Perolio announced Friday.

Director Perolio went to Hartselle Wednesday and was in conference with a number of people there. The physicians and the druggists offered their entire co-operation in the matter and he was elated over the bright prospects for the Hartselle unit.

The Hartselle branch will be placed in the drug store of Puckett and Orr which firm offered cabinet space. The Ross bus line also offered its co-operation and agreed to bring specimens here twice daily and return them.

Director Perolio again pointed out that the Hartselle branch of the laboratory would not be equipped to finish the examinations of specimens but will have sufficient equipment to do all of the preliminary work. The specimens then will be brought here by the bus line, examined and returned on the same day.

If the Hartselle branch is as successful and officials hope that it will be it is very likely that similar units will be established in other localities in the valley, the state department having given its approval of the unit at Hartselle as a matter of experiment.

'COLDER SATURDAY,' SAYS WEATHER MAN IN FORECAST TODAY

Rainfall Is Predicted For Albany-Decatur Friday Evening

SNOW REPORTED OVER NORTHWEST

Damage To Crops Very Heavy In Many Areas of South

The weather man today again gave hope of breaking the drought which has gripped this section of the state since September. The forecast for tonight was rain with Saturday's forecast being "clear and colder."

Mr. A. H. Irons, government observer, today stated the last rain here was in September 29, when the only twelve one-hundredth of an inch of rain fell. The last rain of any consequence was on September 20, when only an inch fell.

Streams are all low and the Tennessee river was expected to reach the lowest level in years.

Some crops probably have been damaged but the favorable weather has caused much additional cotton to mature.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 7.—The first general snow of the season was reported over the northwest today. Temperatures below freezing accompanied in Minnesota, South Dakota, and North Dakota.

The snow was expected to melt rapidly however as the weather Bureau forecast rising temperatures for today.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 7.—A heavy rain and hail storm breaking a long drought record over most of Oklahoma was reported last night. At Enid in the northwestern part of the state the mercury dropped 40 degrees at midnight. Colder weather with snow is predicted.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 7.—Rain which began falling at Baton Rouge this afternoon with every indication that it would spread throughout the state broke a record for drought that has stood for 90 years.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 7.—The driest summer since the weather bureau was established here in 1895 received a set back when it began raining this forenoon at Baton Rouge with indications that the precipitation would spread and with a forecast of showers for New Orleans. October 3, 11 and 12 it sprinkled but so little the weather bureau classified it only a trace.

The drought has cost the state hundreds of thousands of dollars. Deer are reported dying from thirst. Muskrats, which supply the bulk of Louisiana's annual $12,000,000 raw fur crop, have perished by hundreds of thousands. Cattle in large numbers have died and crops have suffered heavily.

Small streams have dried up and the state conservation commission has saved several millions of fish by netting them in stagnant pools and transferring them to running streams. Grass fires have prevailed throughout.

Hartselle News

When the news reached here that Rev. R. W. Anderson had been returned to this station, it was received with genuine satisfaction by practically all the membership of his large congregation and not only so, but by the membership of other congregations here as well. He'll be held in the very highest esteem by all, and his return is gladly welcomed.

The election passed off quietly here at the two polling places Tuesday, and a fair sized vote was cast.

I. W. Griffin, vice president of the Bank of Hartselle is having the holes dug preparatory to planting the black maple trees as a memorial to the soldier dead who fell in the world war from this county. The trees will be planted along the highway beginning at the arch, and extending to the fair grounds in the east side of the highway.

The trees will arrive soon from a nursery when appropriate ceremonies will mark the planting of them. Suitable inscriptions will be placed at a prominent place, giving the names of those who made the supreme sacrifice.

Dr. W. M. Booth was called to Nashville, Tenn., Monday evening to see his son Vaughn who was suffering with blood poisoning, the result of a wound received at Tuscaloosa last Saturday in a football game. While he has a right painful wound, it is not necessarily dangerous.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira St. Clair of Cedartown, Ga., are visiting relatives and friends here and elsewhere in the county this week. Mr. St. Clair formerly lived here, though several years has been train dispatcher with headquarters in the above city.

New Nerve Oil Ends Rheumatic Pain

The Actual Pain of Rheumatism, Neuritis, Gout and Lumbago, is due to an Irritation of the Nerves of the Muscle or the Joint. End Muscle or Joint Pain by Treating Inflamed Nerves.

Pain in all forms of rheumatism, neuritis, lumbago or sciatica, is always due to an irritation or inflammation of the nerves of the muscle or joint. When you feel pain in the muscle, it is the nerves of the muscle that hurt. When the pain is in a joint, it is the nerves of the joint that are affected. As everyone knows, in a toothache, the pain is in the nerve of the tooth. Just as a dentist treats the nerve in end toothache, so must a remedy stop the pain in the nerves of the muscle or joint before it can give you relief.

German science has now produced a remarkable new nerve oil known as BUIHLER OIL, which when applied to the painful joint or muscle, penetrates right through the skin and reaches the inflamed or irritated nerves—no matter how deep seated—so that relief from pain is quickly obtained from the first application. BUIHLER OIL can be had from any of the druggists named below with a written guarantee of sure relief or money back.

But the insulting words were scarcely uttered than Sak-el-Bahr's great hand had taken the wazeer by the nape of his fat neck, a growl of anger running through the assembly to approve him.

"By the favor of Shaitan, sayest thou, thou sexless dog?" he growled, and tightened his grip so that the wazeer squealed and twisted in an agony of pain.

Down was his head thrust, and still down, until his fat body gave way, and he lay supine and writhing in the dust of the sok.

"Shall I strangle thee, thou father of filth, or shall I fling thy soft flesh to the hooks to teach thee what is a man's due from thee?"

And as he spoke he rubbed the too daring fellow's face roughly on the ground.

"Mercy!" squealed the wazeer. "Mercy, O mighty Sak-el-Bahr, as thou lookest for mercy!"

"Unsay thy words, thou offal. Pronounce thyself a liar and a dog."

"I do unsay them. I have foully lied. Thy wealth is the reward sent thee by Allah for thy glorious victories over the unbelievers."

"Put out thine offending tongue," said Sak-el-Bahr, "and cleanse it in the dust. Put it forth, I say."

Ayoub obeyed him in fearful alacrity, whereupon Sak-el-Bahr released his hold and allowed the unfortunate fellow to rise at last, half-choked with dirt, livid of face, and quaking like a jelly, an object of ridicule and cruel mockery to all assembled.

"Now get thee hence, ere my sea-hawks lay their talons on thee, Go!"

Ayoub departed in all haste to the increasing jeers of the multitude and the taunts of Tsamanni, whilst Sak-el-Bahr turned him once more to the dalai.

"At one thousand and six hundred phillips this slave is thine, O Sak-el-Bahr, thou glory of Islam. May Allah increase thy victories!"

"Pay him, Ali," said the corsair shortly, and he advanced to receive his purchase.

Face to face stood he now with Rosamund, for the first time since that day before the encounter with the Dutch argosy when he had sought her in the cabin of the carack.

One swift glance she bestowed on him, then, her senses reeling with horror at her circumstance, she shrank back, her face of a deathly pallor, in his treatment of Ayoub she had just witnessed the lengths of brutality of which he was capable, and she was not to know that this brutality had been a deliberate piece of mummery calculated to strike terror into her.

Pondering her now he smiled a tight-lipped cruel smile that only served to increase her terror.

"Come," he said in English.

She cowered back against the dalai as if for protection. Sak-el-Bahr reached forward, caught her by the wrists, and almost tossed her to his Nubians, Abiad and Zalzer, who were attending him.

"Cover her face," he bade them. "Bear her to my house. Away!"

CHAPTER XIX THE TRUTH

The sun was dipping swiftly to the world's rim when Sak-el-Bahr with his Nubians and his little retinue of corsairs came to the gates of that white house of his on its little eminence outside the Babel-Queb, and beyond the walls of the city.

When Rosamund and Lionel, brought in the wake of the corsair, found themselves in the spacious courtyard beyond the dark and narrow entrance, the blue of the sky contained but the paling embers of the dying day, and suddenly, sharply upon the evening stillness, came a muscadin's voice calling the faithful unto prayer.

Slaves fetched water from the fountain that played in the middle of the quadrangle and tossed aloft a slender silver spear of water to break into a myriad gems and so shower down into the broad marble basin. Sak-el-Bahr washed, as did his followers, and then he went down upon the praying-mat that had been set for him, whilst his corsairs detached their cloaks and spread them upon the ground to serve them in like stead.

The Nubians turned the two slaves about, lest their glances should defile the orisons of the faithful, and left them so, facing the wall and the green gate that led into the garden whence were wafted on the cooling air the perfume of jessamine and lavender. Through the laths of the gate they might have caught a glimpse of the riot of color there, and they might have seen the slaves arrested by the Persian waterwheel at which they had been toiling and chanting until the call to prayer had come to strike them into statues.

Sak-el-Bahr rose from his devotions, uttered a sharp word of command, and entered the house. The Nubians followed him, urging their captives before them up the narrow stairs, and so brought them out upon the terrace on the roof, that space which in Eastern houses is devoted to the women, but which no women's foot had ever trodden since this house had been tenanted by Sak-el-Bahr the wifeless.

This terrace, which was surrounded by a parapet some four feet high, commanded a view of the city straggling up the hillside to eastward from the harbor and of the island at the end of the mole which had been so laboriously built by the labor of Christian slaves from the stones of the ruined fortress—the Penon, which Kheyr-ed-Din Barbarossa had wrested from the Spaniards. The deepening shroud of evening was now upon all, transmuting white and yellow walls alike to a pearly grayness.

An awning supported upon two gigantic spears hung out from the southern wall of the terrace which rose to twice the height of that forming the parapet on its other three sides. Under this was a divan and fifteen cushions, and near it a small Moorish table of ebony inlaid with mother-of-pearl and gold. Over the opposite parapet, where a lattice had been set, rioted a trailing rose tree charged with blood-red blossoms, though now their colors were merged into the all-encompassing grayness.

Here Lionel and Rosamund looked at each other in the dim light, their faces gleaming ghostly each to each, whilst the Nubians stood like statues by the door that opened from the stair-head.

The man groaned, and clasped his hands before him. The doublet which had been torn from him in the sok had since been restored and temporarily repaired by a strand of palmetto cord. But he was woefully bedraggled. Yet his thoughts, if his first words are to be taken as an indication of them, were for Rosamund's condition rather than his own.

"O God, that you should be subjected to this!" he cried. "That you should have suffered what you have suffered! The humiliation of it, the barbarous cruelty! Oh!" He covered his haggard face with his hands.

She touched him gently on the arm.

"What I have suffered is but a little thing," she said, and her voice was wonderfully steady and soothing.

"Cover her face," he bade them. "Bear her to my house."

Ing. Have I not said that these Godolphins were brave folk? Even their women were held to have something of the male spirit in their breasts; and to this none can doubt that Rosamund now bore witness.

"Do not pity me, Lionel, for my sufferings are at an end or very nearly."

She smiled strangely, the smile of exaltation that you may see upon the martyr's face in the hour of doom.

"How?" quoth he, in faint surprise.

"How?" she echoed. "Is there not always a way to thrust aside life's burden when it grows too heavy—heavier than God would have us bear?"

His only answer was a groan. Indeed, he had done little but groan in all the hours they had spent together since they were brought ashore from the carack.

Slaves entered, bearing four enormous flaming torches, which they set in iron sconces protruding from the wall of the house. Thence they shed a lurid ruddy glow upon the terrace. The slaves departed again, and presently, in the black gap of the doorway between the Nubians a third figure appeared unheralded. It was Sak-el-Bahr.

KIWANIS TO MEET

Health is Wealth

Health is one of the greatest things your family can possess. It brings happiness and success. But health must be safe-guarded by good wholesome foods that are prepared from the purest ingredients. This is especially true of bakings. If they are not properly raised, we all know that they are not easily digested. Many times when self-rising flour is used in place of good plain flour and dependable baking powder—the results are flat, soggy and heavy foods.

Don't take chances! Use a reliable brand of baking powder and plain flour. Then you will be sure of healthful bakings that are easily digested.

Remember, science has never found anything to take the place of the tried and tested method of using plain flour and good baking powder in preparing bakings. Millions of housewives now know by actual experience that many preparations that are claimed to take their place are worthless and dangerous to health because they fail to leaven. There is no comparison.

Calumet, the Economy Baking Powder, is known to be one sure and positive aid to successful bakings that are always pure, sweet and wholesome.

That's the reason its sales are 2½ times those of any other brand.

way about the corporation I have the honor to represent, with the hope that I shall in the time allotted to me, strengthen you in the opinion, which I am sure you hold, that there is and always must be a community of interests between us, and that inimical legislation and unconscionable verdicts affect you indirectly as they affect us directly. Transportation is the only thing the railroads have to sell, and the cost of producing their product is the controlling factor in fixing the price at which that product is sold. Legislative not constructive is costly, and, along with excessive verdicts, enters into the cost of production, which the consumer must pay.

"More than two and one-half years ago, the President of the Louisville and Nashville railroad company, believing as all loyal L. & N. men believe, that his company had a good case, determined no longer to submit in silence to the unwarranted, malicious, and mendacious attacks on the railroad institution by demagogues throughout the country, but to carry that case to the people of the south, upon whom it must depend for its prosperity, brought the speaker then proceeded to read in part one of the typical advertisements, put out by the Louisville and Nashville railroad which showed the spirit purpose and service of the road. Some of the statistics of Mr. Donnohue were as follows:

"So far as the L. & N. is concerned it started its career as a trunk line with 186 miles of railroad and a capitalization of $3,000,000. It now operates more than five thousand miles and its physical property could not be replaced for $480,000,000.

"On your side of the picture, the exhibit is even more imposing. In the last two decades, the production of coal in the South, increased 69.78 per cent, compared with an increase of 28.72 per cent in the balance of the United States. Pig iron production in the south increased 41.98 per cent against 35.87 per cent in other parts of the country. In the south active cotton spindles increased 44.75 per cent while in the rest of the country, the increase was only 23.87 per cent and cotton used in manufacturing increased in the south 59.55 per cent compared with an increase of 42.69 per cent in other parts of the United States.

"In 1880, 71,482,000 tons of coal were mined in the United States, while in 1923 in the south, 188,000,000 tons were mined. Last year the south produced 362,000,000 barrels of oil compared with 209,556,000 for the entire country in 1910. In 1923, the south mined 7,533,000 tons of iron ore and produced 4,557,000 tons compared with 7,120,000 tons of iron ore and 3,835,000 tons of pig iron produced in the United States in 1880.

"Although the South produces but 25 per cent of all of the standing timber in the United States, it is producing, for the nation, practically all of the country's naval stores which is between 65 and 75 per cent of the world's supply of turpentine and rosin."

The speaker said:

"My message is important to you because the railroads, in addition to furnishing transportation by rail, consume in the production of that transportation 28 per cent of all the bituminous coal mined, for which they pay $500,000,000 each year; 6 per cent of all the hard coal mined which costs annually $17,000,000; 20 per cent of all the oil produced which is worth $75,000,000; 15 per cent of all the timber cut, and this costs $232,000,000 each year. The railroads use 30 per cent of all the steel and steel produced and 10 per cent of all the copper mined. They employ approximately 2,000,000 men and women, to whom are paid annually $3,000,000,000. They paid in taxes last year $336,000,000. These things being true, and they are true, is it too much to say that in a most intimate, direct way the railroads touch the well-being, happiness and prosperity of every man, woman, and child in the United States and therefore should be fostered and encouraged.

The railroads as never before are coming to the public with their problems and are representing that they have been through their baptism of fire; that the 'dead hand' of the financial buccaneer is not at their throats, if it ever was; that not Wall Street, but Main street represented by 800,000 stockholders, including trust estates, savings banks, insurance companies, and other like financial institutions—and nearly the same number of bondholders, owns the railroads; that they are honestly and efficiently managed; that their hands are clean, as clean as those of other corporations which are now enjoying public favor; and that they are public-service corporations in everything the name implies, furnishing to the public high-class transportation service and asking only that they be permitted to earn a reasonable return not more than six per cent, on the value of their property devoted to a public use.

Railroads Need Support

The speaker referred briefly to the election of President Coolidge, but added that the rail problems were not solved as long as 'destructive federal legislation' was contemplated by so many. He said present federal regulation of railroads was 'ample.' The speaker closed by declaring that he believed 'we are on the threshold of a period of great business expansion.'

"It may be that the railroads in 1925 will be called upon to handle 55,000,000 cars loaded with revenue freight." Mr. Donnohue declared that railroad service was never better.

Negress Held At Morgan Co. Jail

Mary Oldacre, negro woman, is held at the county jail in connection with the shooting of a woman said to be her sister. The shooting occurred on East Pond street near 8 o'clock this morning. It was charged that the woman held used a 12 gauge shot gun the load entering the calf of the wounded woman's leg.

The Oldacre woman was found by the Albany police after a search under a pile of household effects, Chief Hendrix digging in the clothes with the shotgun, causing the woman to make her presence known.

Railroad Labor Plans Conference

(Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, Oct. 7.—Chief executives and representatives of 20 railroad brotherhoods and affiliated organizations will meet here tomorrow morning to "discuss the Howell-Burkley bill and decide our future course of action."

The bill seeks to abolish the railroad labor board. It is the first bill on the calendar when congress reconvenes. The chief executives of the brotherhoods and affiliated organizations strongly favor the abolition of the Howell-Burkley bill to abolish the railroad labor board and set up, in its place, legislation providing for arbitration in line with the old Newlands act.

The bill creates a national board of mediation and conciliation composed only of public members and creates boards of adjustment composed of railroad managers and employees only to handle grievances and interpret rules.

THE FLIGHT OF EZRA MEEKER

Ezra Meeker's flight over the Oregon trail to attend the air meet at Dayton was one of those events that peculiarly satisfy the sense of the fitness of things. "If only they could have lived to see it," is often exclaimed in reference to the old time pioneers when some new wonder of this age of wonders has fully arrived. Ezra Meeker, going on 94, has lived to see one of the greatest of these wonders and to take part in its progress. Of course, he was the lion of the Dayton meet.

Mr. Meeker was not a '49er, though he is a genuine survivor of the pioneers of those days, and a famous one, for his six months' journey overland by ox cart in 1852 was repeated when he was 76 years old, with part of the original part in his new equipment, and it was largely through his enterprise and his appreciation of sentimental values that the historic trail was permanently marked along the way while its course could still be positively identified.

Of course, it is not only as a pioneer that Mr. Meeker is of public interest. A long life marked by its full share of hardships but retaining the new spirit of adventure and of adaptability to new times and an eager interest in the future carries a message of inspiration of unquestionable social value. Mr. Meeker for many years has made it a special point to contribute to the cheer of his fellow veterans—octogenarians and nonagenarians. "Genarians" of every age will take heart from his rugged example.—Springfield Republican.

CREAMERY PSYCHOLOGY

Cynics may say that a man will do anything for money. The manager of a creamery in one of the northwestern states believed, and proved, that pride forms a better motivating impulse under some conditions.

The manager, who knew something about psychology as well as about cream, was distressed because only 40 per cent of all the cream brought in by his farmer patrons was sweet and of high quality. He made various attempts at grading the cream, even offering to pay more for sweet cream. Still his patrons remained indifferent.

Last fall, when he was painting and repairing the creamery, he conceived a clever scheme. Two of his cream vats he painted spotless white. The third he painted dark red. Comment was aroused immediately, and when patrons asked what the color distinction was all about he cheerfully explained that the red vat was to be used for the sour, poor cream that came in. Only sweet, firm cream could go into the white vats. Incidentally, this wise man did not hesitate to tell which patrons brought in the good cream and which did not.

An immediate change took place. Farmers didn't like to have it noised abroad that their cream was put into the red vat, so they got busy to improve the quality of their cream and to take proper care of it so that it reached the creamery sweet.

It was a comparatively short time before the amount of good cream brought in jumped from 40 per cent to 75 per cent. And the good work is still going on. Now that the farmers in that vicinity have got the habit, they're glad to maintain the higher standard set by the creamery manager. They find that it pays their purses as well as their pride.—St. Augustine Record.

UNITED STATES LEADS IN CRIME SHOULD BE AND COULD BE REDUCED

A judge of the Court of General Sessions in New York City, recently said that the United States is the most lawless nation on earth. A special committee on law enforcement from the American Bar Association, made a report last year in which it estimated that 9,500 people were killed in crimes of violence in 1921, alone in this country.

The judge is easily sustained in his sweeping indictment when we consider that the committee of the war association was composed of men like Gov. Charles S. Whitman. They produced the evidence. To show that we held the record for murder, and lawlessness in general, it is only necessary to compare our court figures with those of other countries.

A comparison of figures would be necessary to definitely establish our right to the title of "record holder" in case anyone wished to dispute it. As a matter of fact, however, we are so far ahead of all other countries, that it is unnecessary to quote statistics as proof. Next to the United States, Italy is the greatest offender, and the United States has about two homicides to Italy's one. We have about seven times as many murders as England, in proportion to the population.

The bar association committee after making an exhaustive study of crime in the United States, and of the criminal laws, reported as its belief that the means for coping with crime and criminals are entirely inadequate and ineffective. They said that there were three great essentials lacking in our method of dealing with criminals in our courts: celerity, certainty, and finality.

One of the reasons Englishmen give for the low homicide rate in England is fear of the law. In that country a man with murder in his heart knows that he will be arrested, tried speedily, sentenced to hang, if he commits murder. But more than this, he knows he will surely hang, if he is convicted.

The trouble with law enforcement in the United States is, in the final analysis, to be found in our courts and laws. We allow too much delay between the time a crime is committed and the day sentence is to be passed or executed. The best way to stop "pistol toting" is to put a few "toters" safely away for a year or so so where no gun will be needed. The next step to lower our homicide record would consist of changes in our laws which would speed up the trial of all criminal cases, and curtail the power of a chief executive to nullify the action of the courts by executive clemency.—Anniston Star.

PUBLICITY ON INCOME TAX RETURNS AROUSES THE PUBLIC

Newspapers over the nation have much to say about the publicity law on income tax returns. The same bill which recently aroused so much excitement in Washington, after papers had published some of the returns in New York, and then dropped them out of later edition, on official words of caution from the capital.

A very large share of the general public, apparently, is much perturbed over the publicity scheme and it is coming in for much panning from the newspapers also.

The New York Times is quoted by The Gadsden Times-News as declaring it seems rather late to be kicking up such a row, when the public has ample warning before that publicity was likely to come. The Times said: "What seems so objectionable and offensive now was foreseen at that time. All the peeping and prying into other people's affairs; all the danger of exposing private business to reckless or sinister public attacks; the hateful comparison which will be made between men in the same business—all these things and the many others which are today the subject of indignant outcry, were predicted as certain to result from the adoption of the amendment to the tax bill urged chiefly by Senator Norris to compel publicity. This was a plain departure from the original scheme of the income tax."

The Gadsden paper adds: "The Times could have gone further and said that the idea is repulsive to every sense of right and justice, that it is un-American in principle and without the least real value to any honest person. It is, in fact, one of the most infamous laws congress has passed in many years."

One cannot but read the Times-News comment without becoming convinced that the Gadsden newspaper opposes the bill, and The Daily grants that the grounds it points out for its opposition seem safe enough.

It doesn't fit in with one's sense of right and justice to compel publicity regarding their income. At the same time it must be remembered that publicity, like fire, is a thing which works much good when used in the right and proper manner, and works great damage when it is wrongfully used.

Take, for instance, the matter of personal property taxes. Publicity might not accomplish the end sought, but if some agency could be found by means of which good citizens, honest citizens, people of good character and high purposes, could be persuaded to give in fair and just estimates of the real value of their taxable property, there would be enough money for the state of Alabama to build good roads in every county and a schoolhouse in every neighborhood.

What is true in Alabama probably is true in other states. If every citizen assessed his property equitably, the income tax would not be necessary.

Alabama's tax rate is high enough to meet all needs. More than high enough. Some of us are paying enough taxes, some of us are not. All of us feel that we are. None of us want our taxes increased, but as a simple matter of justice, is it anything but right that every citizen should assess his or her property at an equitable figure?

Look over the tax assessments in any county in Alabama, and there are likely to be assessments in any county in Alabama, and there are likely to be assessments put too low. Just how otherwise scrupulously honest citizens can reconcile their assessments with their market price for property will always remain a mystery, unless it is because it is so frequently done that it has grown common place and a conscious, which would make the offender uncomfortable were he to tell other than the whole truth and nothing but the truth in a court of law, pays no attention whatever to one making a tax assessment?

Publicity on assessments might prove to accomplish no good. A "tell the tax assessor the truth" week might help out some.

DUGGER-BUTLER

At the home of the brides parents in East Albany Miss Minnie Butler and Mr. Joe H. Dugger were quietly married in the presence of relatives and a few friends on Thursday evening. Rev. L. F. Goodwin performed the impressive ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Dugger are at home in East Albany.

BRAGG-PRIDE WEDDING

The most beautiful wedding of the season occurred on Thursday evening at 6 o'clock in the First Presbyterian church in Decatur when Miss Mabel Pride, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Thompson Pride, was united in marriage to Dr. John C. Bragg, the Reverend James D. Wallace minister of the church officiating.

The aisles down which the bridal party marched, were marked at each pew with white standards entwined with maiden hair fern up to the top which held a lighted cathedral candle and midway a large bow of pink tulle caught a pink and white chrysanthemum alternately. The rostrum was banked with ferns almost to the ceiling and in front of these were large ferns on white pedestals which graduated towards the center as did the pedestal candle holders with white candles. Three standing reed vases were set in front, the center one holding gorgeous white chrysanthemums and the other two were filled with flowers in pink and white. The choir enclosure was covered with vines and on either end of the rail were baskets of pink and white chrysanthemums and beside these were candle stands forming the shape of crosses.

A brilliant musical program rendered under the direction of Mrs. W. K. McNeill, preceding the ceremony. The prelude was played by Mrs. Lahleen Kinney who accompanied the soloist and chorus on the organ also. Miss Dorothy Patterson in her inimitable manner sang "Because" after which a chorus composed of Mrs. McNeill, Miss Jane Knight, Mr. H. R. Davis, Miss Ruth Banks and Mr. Robert Banks gave a very enjoyable number "Miracle of Love." Barton Isbell of Tusculum, sang "I Love You Truly" and his interpretation was lovely. Mrs. McNeill in her superb voice closed the program with a solo "Today, Tomorrow and Forever."

To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, the bridal party entered preceded by Rev. James D. Wallace and the ushers who were: Edwin Shackelford, Clifton Almon, Hubert Young and Asbury Malone. The bridesmaids, Miss Helen Russell, Miss Blumette Wallace, Miss Mary Harvey and Mrs. Thompson Pride, all attired in lovely green chiffon and lace dresses with trimmings of rhinestones and with silver accessories. They all carried arm bouquets of pink roses. The former two came singly down the left aisle while the latter two, marched down the right crossing in front stood beside the altar. Mrs. H. D. Greer, a sister of the bride, was matron of honor and she was unusually pretty in a beautiful pink gown and she carried pink roses. The two dainty little flower girls, Anne Frances Harris and Elizabeth Pride, the latter of Memphis, were precious in their pink accordion pleated dresses and they cast white rose petals in the pathway of the bride. The groom came in with his best man, Dr. H. D. Greer and the bride entered on the arm of her father, Lawrence Thompson Pride. Miss Pride was beautiful in white duchess-satin embroidered with pearls with a silk net train over satin extending from the shoulders. She wore a coronet of orange blossoms which held in place the bridal veil. Her shower bouquet was brides roses.

After the wedding a beautiful informal reception was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. D. Greer when about fifty intimate friends of the bride and groom called. The home was lovely with pink shaded lights and it was decorated in pink, green and white. Ices were served with the bridal cake.

Dr. and Mrs. Bragg left at eight o'clock on a ten days bridal tour after which they will be at home in the Adams Apartments. Mrs. Bragg wore a very becoming going away suit of fuchsia trimmed in fur and accessories to match.

Mrs. John Arantz and Mrs. C. V. Dupont left Thursday to visit the former's daughter, Mrs. O. Freed Baur in Nashville, after which Mrs. Dupont will go to be the guest of relatives in Louisville and Mrs. Arantz will visit another daughter in Lexington, Ky.

Mrs. Thompson Pride has returned to her home in Memphis, Tenn., after spending the past two weeks with Mrs. H. D. Greer to attend the pre-nuptial affairs given for Miss Mabel Pride. She was joined on Thursday by Mr. Pride for the wedding.

LOVE PARTY FOR MR. GARRISON

Mrs. J. H. Pettey gave a love party for Mrs. John Garrison, who, with Mr. Garrison, will leave soon to make their home in Fort Smith, Ark.

When the guests arrived, the hostess gave each a handkerchief on which they embroidered either an initial or a design and they were presented to the guest of honor as they were completed. Then a story contest in which sewing terms were to be added, was enjoyed at which Mrs. Walton Hill was the lucky contestant and she received a prize.

Later Mrs. Garrison was delightfully surprised when the two pretty little daughters of Mrs. Pettey, Martha Frances and Rebecca, showered her with lovely personal gifts from those present.

A delicious frozen fruit salad course was served late in the afternoon.

The list of guests only included Mrs. Garrison's closest and most intimate friends and they are: Mrs. Roy Billings, Mrs. Zeno Bailey, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. O. C. Parker, Mrs. Stanton, Mrs. W. E. Todd, Mrs. W. M. Dinmore, Mrs. Seneca Burr, Mrs. T. A. Caddell, Mrs. Walton Hill, Mrs. A. H. Higson, Mrs. James Johnson, Mrs. B. D. Meadors, Mrs. Carter McGwier and Miss Florence Pettey.

TRACKS TAKEN UP ON CHURCH STREET

Trolley Line Gives Way As Paving Plans Progress

Tracks of the Alabama Traction company on Church street are being taken up today to make way for the street paving program, which is nearing completion in Decatur.

It was announced Friday that by Friday evening all of the streets east of the main line Louisville and Nashville Railroad lines will have been completed, with the exception of Church street. Work on the latter thoroughfare has been held back by the street car track puzzle, the traction company recently having suspended its service here.

Street contractors desired to establish the new grade on Church, but were in a quandary in regard to the tracks. Work now will be rushed on the Church street improvements, it was said.

Construction of the new pavement on Railroad street has been finished and the Danville road will be completed soon. It is supposed that the tracks on Third street, west, also will be taken up unless some other way is found to finish the paving on that thoroughfare.

SLEEPLESSNESS

Virginia Lady Says That Many of Her Long-Suffered Ills Have Fled Since She Took Cardui.

Bristol, Va.—"I can sleep good at night now, something I have never done before in my life," says Mrs. Deala Hawks, of 712 Prospect St., this city, "and it is due to Cardui."

"I was always nervous and tossed when I should have been asleep, but since I took Cardui it has strengthened me, and my general health is so improved that many of the ills from which I have suffered for years have fled."

"I used to go to bed tired and, when I would get up in the morning, I was still tired. Now I feel like doing a day's work in my garden or in the house, and I owe all this good health to Cardui, for I had suffered for years until I took it."

"I had had female trouble for years and once, for six months, I was flat on my back. I am glad to recommend to other women a medicine which has helped me."

If you are nervous and run-down in health, suffering as Mrs. Hawks describes above, it is probable that Cardui will greatly help you. Try it.

HIGH HATS PRYING WAY TO POPULAR FAVOR WITH CLOSE-FITTING CLOCHE

THE STRICTLY TAILORED HAT OF HATTERS' PLUSH

BEBE DANIELS ADOPTS THE HIGH SILK HAT

THE DRESSY TYPE OF VELVET & OSTRICH

THIS WIDE BRIM HAS ACHIEVED WIDE POPULARITY

TWO HUGE POMPONS ON A FELT, FOR EVERY-DAY WEAR

It has been a struggle for the milliners to pry the cloche off the head of the American woman and place thereon the high silk hat. They have succeeded in a measure, but not entirely. Madame insists that she wear her close-fitting, tiny, cloche at least half of the time.

Bebe Daniels, the Paramount star, when she's not snugly fitted in a cloche, adopts the new hat, as shown in the photo above. This hat is smart. It is trimmed in two full, stiff, pompons of ostrich, placed at the right side of the brim. This is the new hat she has been wearing while working in her latest picture, "Argentine Love."

The small sketches show four of Miss Daniels' hats. The one at the top left is a very severe model, quite tailored, and trimmed in one lone, short quill. This little feather is dyed in indigo and white, and is topped with a cherry colored tip. The hat itself is black hatters' plush.

The hat at the top right is a more dressy affair, with a lovely soft pair of ostrich feathers caressing the cheek and coming well down over the left shoulder. This model is in black velvet.

The hat at the lower left is one of the new models for those who wish to drop the old cloche and yet will not take up the new high hats. This has a wide brim, narrow at the back, and trimmed plainly but pleasingly with a broad bow of velvet across the front.

The last hat shown, at the lower right, is a cocoa colored felt, trimmed with two huge matching pompons.

This soft felt type of hat is very flattering to almost every woman, and much easier to wear than the straight, rather hard lines of the square-crowned group of chapeaux.

Albany Meets Hartselle, Decatur Meets Athens, Independents Meet Florentines

The Albany high school grid artists journeyed to the fair city of Hartselle this afternoon where diplomatic relations will be strained for an hour while the local school and the Morgan County high teams are battling for grid supremacy in the county of Morgan. Up until this hour the charges of the Morgan Countians have been favored to win but with the local teams brilliant victory over the Sheffield clan odds changed a bit and the game promised to be a very even affair.

Coach Webb will possibly start the same lineup he used successfully against the brawn of the Tri-Cities with Peterson at center, Graham and Zanvit at guards, Spencer and Mitchell at tackles, Papenburg and Captain Lee at ends. The backfield combination remains intact with Singleton, Tuck, Giers and Johnson.

Morgan County high has had a very successful season this year and hopes to avenge the defeat handed them last year on the local field when they were unable to cope with the big Central line and backfield.

Just because the Albany team has gone out of town is no sign that there is no football entertainment on the local field. The Athens Aggies have arrived for the first home fracas of the Decatur high school and as this is hurled to the linotype both teams are battling at Cooper-Wells field.

Coach Grimes of the Decatur high team has been particularly unfortunate this year in being followed by a jinx of injuries and various maladies in his squad, but the game this afternoon found him better prepared along that line than ever before with only two regulars failing to answer the call to arms.

Tomorrow afternoon, Saturday at 3:30 p. m. at Cooper-Wells field one of the heaviest games of the local season will be played between the Y. M. C. A. Independents and the Florence Normal team.

This afternoon while the other teams of the cities are busily engaged in settling disputes of the happenings on the outside and knowing only that Saturday afternoon they will meet a real test Coach Sample endeavored to round his men to the best form possible for they will need it with the game one of the hardest on the schedule with the exception of the Morgan tilt that comes on next Friday.

Coach Sample stressed the fundamentals in which the team is sadly lacking this afternoon and only signal drill was gone through with. The team is in excellent condition and is prepared to make the normalities go the limit Saturday before they gain a decision.

Coach L. H. Duyek has had a hard row of stumps at Rollins College this year according to the newspaper reports of the games in which his team has participated. Yesterday his team again went down to defeat at the hands of the Newberry eleven although the margin was slight.

Sewanee has the unique record of having scored in their first tilt of the season and failed to count thereafter. It can be said however that the Tigers have done some real battling and no team that they have faced have erased their championship aspirations by a heavy vote. It has always been by a margin of 7 or more than 14.

Virginia has been springing the old tale of woe about injuries that caused the loss of a game to the Generals. Let's see what happens this week with Georgia when the two meet at Charlottesville.

out the southern part of the state and on several occasions the New Orleans fire department has worked days at a time to prevent flames from entering outlying residential districts from the marshes.

BIRMINGHAM, Nov. 7—A sun a noontime as bright and warm as mid-May befogged the hopes of those who had relied upon the weather prediction for "rain and colder" here today.

A few thunder pillars around the south and western horizons were the only gleam of rain possibilities in sight. Electric fans were more in order than overcoats.

For 39 days, according to the district forecaster, Birmingham and environs have been void of moisture. It that time the community has seldom seen and swallowed so much smoke and dust. Jones Valley for days has been literally buried underneath the pall which has hung heavily night and day; some days so heavily that the sun had difficulty in showing its face.

This drought is a record for this community, and is said to be costing heavily. Gardeners report that winter greens are dried up and ruined beyond remedy; streams in pasture been too dry and empty; emfysd are dry; wells are without water in many instances and the ground has been too dry and hard for fall and winter sowing of grains.

NEGRO CUT

County officers today were informed by a negro giving the name of Annie Hopkins that she had been slightly cut by her husband, Jim Hopkins. The latter late today had not been located. The affray was alleged to have occurred at the Hopkins home in the negro section, near the river.

Hounds Put On the Trail Cotton Thief

Bloodhounds today were put on the trail of an alleged cotton thief, who was believed to have stolen a bale of cotton from the farm of Fred Robertson, near here. Robertson reported the robbery to officers early today and a message was sent to Huntsville asking that bloodhounds be sent. The hounds arrived during the morning, accompanied by a Huntsville officer, and the searchers immediately left for the Robertson farm.

He paused, and his tone became gentler, it assumed the level note of one who reasons impassively.

"Was it not an odd thing, now, that none should ever have paused to seek with certainty whence that blood proceeded, and to consider that I bore no wound in those days? Master Baine knew it, for I submitted my body to his examination, and a document was drawn up and duly attested which should have sent the Queen's pursuivants back to London with drooping tails had I been at Penarrow to receive them."

Faintly through her mind stirred the memory that Master Baine had urged the existence of some such document, that in fact he had gone so far as to have made oath of this very circumstance now urged by Sir Oliver; and she remembered that the matter had been brushed aside as an invention of the justice to answer the charge of laxity in the performance of his duty, particularly as the only co-witness he could cite was Sir Andrew Flack, the parson, since deceased. Sir Oliver's voice drew her attention from that memory.

"But let that be," he was saying, "let us come back to the story itself. I saw the craven weakling shelter. Thereby I drew down suspicion upon myself, and since I could not clear myself save by denouncing him, I kept silent. That suspicion grew to certainty when the woman to whom I was betrothed, recking nothing of my oaths, freely believing the very worst of me, made an end of our betrothal and thereby branded me a murderer and a liar in the eyes of all. Indignation swelled against me, and my pursuivants were on their way to do what the justice of France refused to do."

"So far I have given you facts. Now I give you surmise—my own conclusions—but surmise that strikes, as you shall judge, the very bull's-eye of truth. That dastard to whom I had given sanctuary, to whom I had served as a cloak, measured my nature by his own and feared that I must prove unequal to the fresh burden to be cast upon me. He feared lest under the strain of it I should speak out, advance my proofs, and so destroy him. There was the matter of that wound, and there was something still more unanswerable he feared I might have urged. There was a certain woman—a wanton up at Malpas—who could have been made to speak, who could have revealed a rivalry concerning her between the slayer and your brother. For the affair in which Peter Godolphin met his death was a pitifully, shamefully sordid one at bottom."

For the first time she interrupted him, fiercely.

"Do you malign the dead?" "Patience, mistress," he commanded. "I malign none. I speak the truth of a dead man that the truth may be known of two living ones. Hear me out, then! I have waited long and survived a deal that I might tell you this."

"That craven, then, conceived that I might become a danger to him; so he decided to remove me. He contrived to have me kidnapped one night and put aboard a vessel to be carried to Barbary and sold there as a slave. That is the truth of my disappearance. And the slayer, whom I had befriended and sheltered at my own bitter cost, profited yet further by my removal. God knows whether the prospect of such profit was further temptation to him. In time he came to succeed me in my possessions, and at last to succeed me even in the affections of the faithless woman who once had been my affianced wife."

At last she started from the frozen patience in which she had listened hitherto.

"Do you say that—that Lionel?" she was beginning in a voice choked by indignation.

And then Lionel spoke at last, straightening himself into a stony upright attitude.

"He lies!" he cried. "He lies, Rosamund! Do not heed him."

"I do not," she answered, turning away.

A wave of color suffused the swarthy face of Sak-el-Bahr. A moment his eyes followed her as she moved away a step or two, then they turned their blazing light of anger upon Lionel. He strode silently across to him, his mien so menacing that Lionel shrank back in fresh terror.

Sak-el-Bahr caught his brother's wrist in a grip that was as that of a steel manacle.

"We'll have the truth this night if we have to tear it from you with red-hot pincers," he said between his teeth.

He dragged him forward to the middle of the terrace and held him there before Rosamund, forcing him down upon his knees into a cowering attitude by the violence of that grip upon his wrist.

"Do you know aught of the ingenuity of Moorish torture?" he asked him.

There is no corner of the earth that is not covered by the Associated Press. The world's news at your door on time every afternoon. Call Albany 46 today and subscribe for the Daily. Keep up with the outside world and its affairs.

asked him. "You may have heard of the rack and the wheel and the thumbscrew at home. They are instruments of voluptuous delight compared with the contrivances of Barbary to loosen stubborn tongues."

White and tense, her hands clenched, Rosamund seemed to stiffen before him.

"You coward! You cur! You craven renegade dog!" she branded him.

Oliver released his brother's wrist and beat his hands together. Without heeding Rosamund, he looked down upon Lionel, who cowered shuddering at his feet.

"What do you say to a match between your fingers? Or do you think a pair of bracelets of living fire would answer better, to begin with?"

A squat, sandy-bearded, turbaned fellow, rolling slightly in his gait, came—as had been prearranged—to answer the corsair's summons.

With the toe of his slipper Sak-el-Bahr stirred his brother.

"Look up, dog," he bade him. "Consider me that man, and see if you know him again. Look at him, I say!"

And Lionel looked, yet, since clearly he did so without recognition, his brother explained:

"His name among Christians was Jasper Leigh. He was the skipper you bribed to carry me into Barbary. He was taken in his own toils when his ship was sunk by Spaniards. Later he fell into my power, and because I forbore from hanging him he is today my faithful follower. I should bid him tell you what he knows," he continued, turning to Rosamund, "if I thought you would believe his tale. But since I am assured you would not, I will take other means."

Oliver turned to Jasper again. "Bid All beat me a pair of steel manacles in a brazier and hold them in readiness against my need of them." And he waved his hand. Jasper bowed and vanished.

"The bracelets shall coax confession from your own lips, my brother."

"I have naught to confess," protested Lionel. "You may force lies from me with your ruffianly tortures."

Oliver smiled. "Not a doubt, but that lies will flow from you more readily than truth. But we shall have truth, too, in the end, never doubt it."

He was mocking, and there was a subtle purpose underlying his mockery.

"And you shall tell us a full story," he continued. "In all its details, so that Mistress Rosamund's last doubt shall vanish. You shall tell her how you lay in wait for him that evening in Godolphin Park; how you took him unawares, and—"

"That is false!" cried Lionel in a passion of sincerity that brought him to his feet.

It was false, indeed, and Oliver knew it, and deliberately had recourse to falsehood, using it as a fulcrum upon which to lever out the truth.

"False!" he cried in scorn. "Come, now, be reasonable. The truth, ere torture sucks it out of you. Reflect that I know all—exactly as you told it me. How was it, now. Lurking behind a bush you sprang upon him unawares and ran him through before he could so much as lay a hand to his sword, and so—"

"The lie of that is proven by the very facts themselves," was the furious interruption.

A subtle judge of tones might have realized that here was truth indeed, angry, indignant truth that compelled conviction.

"His sword lay beside him when they found him."

But Oliver was loftily disdainful. "Do I not know? Yourself you drew it after you had slain him."

The taunt performed its deadly work. For just one instant Lionel was carried off his feet by the luxury of his genuine indignation, and in that one instant he was lost.

"As God's my witness, that is false!" he cried wildly. "And you know it. I fought him fair—"

He checked a long, shuddering, drawn breath that was horrible to hear.

AMUSEMENTS

Antonio Moreno plays a dual role in the making of "Tiger Love," but on the screen he is seen in only one of the two roles. He is featured with Estelle Taylor, and he also acted as technical advisor to George Melford who produced the picture for Paramount.

Although Moreno has been one of the foremost screen figures for several years, his role in "Tiger Love" is the first modern Spanish part he has portrayed. "The Spanish Dancer," in which he was featured in support of Pola Negri, was a story of Spain three hundred years ago. "Tiger Love" portrays Spain as it was within the memory of both Moreno and his parents.

Customs in Spain, even today, are strongly reminiscent of that country as it was when George Borrow and Washington Irving wrote of it.

Moreno's advice on the details of Spanish life proved invaluable to the director and materially assisted in making "Tiger Love" one of the most filmed. The picture opens at 8:15, faithful portrayals of Spain, ever filmed. The picture opens a one day run at the Princess theater tomorrow.

Playing in support of the principal players are G. Raymond Nye, Manuel Camere, Edgar Norton, David Torrence, Smit Edwards and Monte Collins.

"THE VANITY BOX" COMING

The advance sale for the "Vanity Box" which comes to the Masque theater on Tuesday, November 11th, is scheduled to open Saturday, November 8th at the Princess theater.

From all indications it appears as though standing room only will prevail, and Manager Ratliff requests all patrons to get their "pasteboard" without further delay.

The chorus will number twenty-four and the company's own orchestra will be added to the regular theater orchestra.
